DIED ON COT HE USED DURING WAR

And Had Loaded Musket by his Side.
Lieutenant Kuhn, Formerly of this County, Succumbs to a Five Years' Illness.

LIEUT. JOHN I. KUHN
Lieut. John I. Kuhn, 82 years old, died in Baltimore on Monday after an illness of five years from a complication of diseases. He was born in Mc-Sherrystown. He was a descendant of one of the old families of this section.
Mr. Kuhn was a veteran of the Civil War, having fought in Purnell's Legion, First Maryland Union Infantry. The company was drilled at Pikesville and was detailed to Cole's Harbor. It was in this battle that Mr.
Kuhn was severely injured. Following this he was taken prisoner at Richmond and taken to the Libby Prison.
There he was confined for some time until an exchange of prisoners was effected.

He participated in the battles of Bull Run, Wilderness and Gettysburg, and up to a few days before his death
Mr. Kuhn could recount accurately his actions during those battles. He died on the cot which was used by him during the war. Beside him at the time of his death was an old gun, which held an unfired bullet of the war. When the war closed Mr. Kuhn ranked as acting captain. Later he was retired with the rank of lieutenant.

He is survived by his widow (Mrs.
Mary A. Kuhn), three sons, (Dr. John
I., Edward R., and James M.) and three daughters, (Mrs. Charles Haugh; Mrs. Phyllis Willard, of Presque, Me., and Miss Rosia M.
Kuhn).

The funeral will take place in Baltimore Friday morning from St.
Bernard's Catholic Church. Burial will be in New Cathedral Cemetery.

MRS. HARRY L. BREAM
Mrs. Mary Mark Bream, wife of Harry L. Bream, of Cashtown, died at her home in that place about one o'clock Monday afternoon from diabetes and complications. She was aged about 68 years.

Mrs. Bream was seriously ill for only about a week. An infection on one of her feet developed gangrene and aggravated an illness from diabetes.
She leaves her husband and nine children, four daughters and five sons, Mrs. Guy Boyd, of York; Mrs. Preston Musselman, Fairfield; Mrs. Benjamin Fisher and Harry Bream, Bunkie, Louisiana; F. Mark Bream, Gettysburg; Clarence and Robert Bream, Cashtown; Miss Faith Bream and John Bream, at home. She also leaves one sister, Dr. Nell Mark, of Baltimore.

Mrs. Bream was a daughter of the late Captain Mark, for many years one of the best known residents of Cashtown. He was a merchant in that place about Civil War time.

The funeral of the late Mrs. H. L.
Bream will be held on Thursday afternoon at one o'clock at her late residence in Cashtown. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery, Gettysburg.

FRANK A. BEITLER
Frank Andrew Beitler, formerly of Gettysburg, died on Monday evening in East Pittsburgh aged 45 years.

Word of his serious illness was received here during the day and at 11:22 Monday evening his brother, Oliver Beitler, left on the express for Pittsburgh. A short time afterward a telegram was received announcing his death.

Mr. Beitler was unmarried. He leaves his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Beitler, of Steinwehr avenue; two brothers and a sister, Oliver Beitler, Steinwehr avenue; Luther Beitler,
North Washington street; Mrs. William B. Fleming, Baltimore street.
He had been a resident of East Pittsburgh for the past fourteen years,
being employed with the Westinghouse Electric Company.

The body will be brought to Gettysburg but the funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

MRS. JOHN GINCK
Mrs. John Ginck died suddenly Monday evening about six o'clock at her home in Mt. Pleasant township, near Brush Run. Her age was 70 years and 10 months.

Mrs. Ginck was suddenly stricken while standing on the porch at the residence of her son, J. H. Ginck, with whom she made her home. A

BUILD MAP OF CAVALRY FIELD

East Cavalry Field to be Shown in Same Way as Main Battlefield.
Map the only one of its Kind in Existence. Careful Work.

At the quarters of the National Park Commission in the Federal Building there is now being made a relief map of East Cavalry Field in the same manner as the battlefield
map, built about twelve years ago, was constructed. The first map is the only one of its kind in existence, was exhibited at the St. Louis Exposition in 1903, and has been viewed by thousands of persons in the offices of the commission. It is regarded as a masterpiece in conception and construction.

The entire product is the result of a plan worked out by Colonel E. B.
Cope who has furnished the great portion of the data necessary for its proper construction. Some of the surveying was done by Colonel Cope soon after the battle, while other figures have been supplied from time to time.

The map is made entirely of wood,
and there is not one piece of iron in the entire affair. Constructed out of layers of white pine, every one of them only one-sixth of an inch in thickness, and cut with a jig-saw to show the outline of the land, it is built up and then shaved off so that it represents exactly every elevation.
These layers are fastened together with wooden pegs and glue.

Even the woods are made of this material and then painted to show where the trees stood. Houses and other buildings are built in the same way—from these sixth inch boards—while there are the necessary lines to show not only every road and stream,
but every fence on the entire field.
The whole is then, suitably painted.

The first map, made twelve years ago is 12 feet, 8 inches by 9 feet, 3 inches in size. It covered 24 square miles. The new map will be 10 feet by 3½ feet and represents 16 square miles. Each one is in three sections.

The fact that there are no other maps in existence similarly constructed makes these of unusual value and interest to the layman, but of special significance to the military man. Colonel Fieberger, of the United States Military Academy at West Point, in viewing the first map not long ago made the significant remark
"Well, that is the right and only perfect way of doing it, but few persons have the patience."

The mechanical work of the first map required about a year and the new map will take nearly as long. J.
C. Wierman and Charles Ziegler are doing the construction work.

When finished it, like the first one,
will be permanent and, with proper care, will last for hundreds of years.

METHODIST REVIVAL

Out of Town Persons Attend Evangelistic Services.

Three decisions and one conversion were announced at Monday evening's revival service in the Methodist church. A number of out of town persons were in the audience. This evening at 7:30 Dr. Oyley's subject will be "God's Visit to People."

physician was summoned from New Oxford but she died before he could reach her side.

Mrs. Ginck was born and reared in Straban township where she spent the greater part of her life. For many years she was a teacher in the public schools of that part of the county.

Her son, with whom she resided, is the only surviving near relative.

Funeral Thursday morning with brief services at the house at 10:30.
Further services and interment at Pines Church, conducted by Rev. Mr.
Nicoll.

MRS. CHRISTIAN McCLEARY

Mrs. Christian McCleary died at her home at Guldens Sunday evening at 8:30 after an extended illness from a complication of diseases aged 76 years, 10 months, and 20 days.

She leaves three daughters, Mrs.
Charles Bosserman, Hanover; Mrs.
George Young, New Chester; Miss Tillie McCleary, at home; and one son, Eli McCleary, of Baltimore.

Funeral Wednesday morning at 10:30 from her late home conducted by Rev. J. B. Baker. Interment in Evergreen Cemetery, Gettysburg.

FIREMEN READY FOR BIG BANQUET

Expect Two Hundred at Annual Supper. Committee in Charge of All Arrangements Complete their Plans. Orchestra to Play.

Everything is in readiness for the big annual banquet of the Gettysburg Fire Company which will be held this evening at a quarter past seven o'clock in the hall of the Order of Independent Americans. About two hundred persons are expected.

The committee in charge of the affair has invited not only each member of the company and his wife, but invitations have been sent to all honorary members and to one person in the family of each deceased member.
The burgess and town council, together with representatives of local newspapers, will also be numbered among the guests.

To feed this large company requires a corps of efficient cooks and helpers. An elaborate banquet of oysters, chicken, vegetables, ice cream and cake is to be prepared and served and the committee has made every arrangement to care for all.
"Greenie" Washington will cook the many chickens which will be required to give all a generous serving. Mrs.
John Raymond will prepare the gallons upon gallons of fried oysters, and James B. Aumen and J. C. Wierman will preside over the stewing of an equal quantity of the bivalves.
They will be ably assisted by the wives of the committee men in charge of the evening.

A departure from former banquets is announced in the doing away with the speaking prior to the supper. An orchestra will play during the evening but, aside from that, there will be no entertainment provided. All feel that this will be an acceptable change.

James B. Aumen, chairman of the committee on arrangements, will "call the meeting to order" and extend the formal invitation to enter the banquet hall. Several "tables" will be required to serve all, the first set of banqueters going out at 7:15 and the others following until all have enjoyed the bountiful supper. The other members of the committee are James W. McDonnell, William D. Gilbert, J.
Clifford Wierman and Edgar C.
Tawney.

Among the young ladies who will assist in serving the supper are Miss MaeBelle Little, Miss Elsie Little,
Miss Emily McDonnell, Miss Helen Aumen, Miss Georgie Aumen, Miss
Majelle McClellan, Miss Mildred
Eden, Miss Ivy Tawney, Miss Helen Rupp, Miss Hattie Ziegler, Miss
Maud Miller, Miss Alice Miller, Miss
Grace Sachs, Miss Helen Wierman, Miss Fairy Pepple.

TRIAL NOW ON

William B. Yantis Claims he was Run Down by C. F. Asper.

Trial of a suit for damage for personal injuries sustained by William B.
Yantis, of Hanover, in a collision of his motorcycle with an automobile driven by Charles F. Asper, of Aspers, was begun before Judge Ross in York County Court on Monday.
The incident occurred on July 13, last,
on the pike between Hanover and Abbottstown, about two miles from Abbottstown, and close to Brown's mill.
Yantis alleges that while he was going at a moderate rate of speed up the hill, Asper came down the hill at high speed and, although he, Yantis, gave him as much of the road as possible, yet Asper neglected the law of the road and negligently and carelessly ran into him, breaking his arm and leg and seriously injuring his wrist and head. Niles & Neff represent the plaintiff and Hersh and Hooper the defendant.

COUNTY TEACHERS TO RALLY HERE

Prominent Speakers will Address Annual February Meeting at Gettysburg on the Day Following School Directors' Convention.

The annual February rally of the teachers of Adams County will be held in Gettysburg on Saturday, the thirteenth, in the High School building. Separate sessions will be held by the various organizations in the morning and, in the afternoon, a joint meeting of all will take place.

County Superintendent Roth has secured as speakers for the directors' convention, on the two days preceding the teachers' gathering, four men of prominence. Dr. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education and J. A. Pentz, State High School Inspector, will be here Thursday, and
L. H. Dennis and Robert M. McNeal, experts on agriculture from the State Department of Public Instruction will speak on Friday. At the teachers' rally two of these men or two other educators of prominence will be present and make addresses.

In the morning the Rural Teachers' Association and the Primary Teachers' Association will hold separate sessions in the class rooms at the school building. The Principals' Association met here ten days ago, but, if a sufficient number are present, they will hold another meeting at this time in February.

Committees are arranging their programs for the morning meetings and Prof. Roth is in charge of the plans for the afternoon session. It will be adjourned in time to allow all to take their trains for home.

TO PRODUCE WITNESSES

First Hearing on Charges by Mr.
Brodbeck.

The first of the hearings in connection with the charges made by Congressman A. R. Brodbeck to the effect that there was fraud in the election of C. William Beales to congress and the contest of his right to a seat in the House of Representatives will be held in the grand jury room in the York County court house next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Notice of the hearing has been sent to Jere S. Black, Donald Swope and D.
P. McPherson, counsel for the congressman-elect by Attorney H. O.
Ruby and John A. Hooper, who represent
Mr. Brodbeck. Many witnesses from the First district of the Twelfth ward, York, will be heard. This is one of the voting districts mentioned by Congressman Brodbeck in his charges of fraud.

SOME STATEMENT

Frederick Says We're not Likely to Get into League.

Gettysburg fans will rise in their wrath at this paragraph from the Frederick News concerning the proposed base ball league:

"It is not thought Gettysburg will enter the fight. The town is small and doesn't support a team so well and every other team in the proposed circuit would have to remain in Pennsylvania over night, which, of course, is an added expense."

When it comes to supporting base ball Gettysburg possibly gives more to the square inch than any town in this section. With the games started on time there is no reason why Martinsburg, Hagerstown and Frederick may not all return home the same day.

END OF JANUARY TERM

Early Close of Regular Session. Two True Bills.

January term of Court came to a close on Monday afternoon after the Grand Jury had brought in true bills against Mary Weaver charged with assault and battery, and against James Klingel and John Mayers, bar
clerk and proprietor of Hotel Willard, Littlestown, charged with selling liquor on Sunday.

C. Yohansen, a Swede arrested a month or more ago by Sheriff Thompson on a charge of burglary, was released. The man understands little English and did not know for quite a while why he was in jail.

A nol prois was entered in the case against Kamps Kister, of York, charged with the larceny of a horse
from Harry Stevens, of Heidlersburg.
The offense is said to have been committed in York County.

MUST RUN TRAINS

Public Service Commission So Orders
concerning Berlin Branch.

The Public Service Commission has issued an order "that the East Berlin Railroad Company shall on or before February 1, 1915, resume service over its lines until such time as it shall be relieved from that duty in accordance with the laws of the state."

The road is now in the possession of William G. Leas who bought it at a receiver's sale on September 9, 1914
and afterward ceased running trains.
Mr. Leas contended that the company had the right to discontinue running trains owing to the fact that the road was a financial failure.

JOHN D., JR., FOR LABOR UNIONS

Heartily in Favor of Those That Aid Workers.

DENIES MINE "ABSOLUTISM"

Police Guard Young Rockefeller as He Tells His Ideals to Federal Commission.

New York, Jan. 26.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., testified before the federal commission on industrial relations in the inquiry into the management of philanthropic foundations and the cause of industrial unrest.

Mr. Rockefeller's testimony dealt largely with the labor situation in the Colorado mining section. Reading from a prepared statement, he defined his attitude toward labor unions and told why he had declined to take a more active part in settling the recent strike of employees of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, in which he is a stockholder, and other companies.

He denied that he had sought or even wished to exercise a sort of absolutism over the coal industry in Colorado, and declared he was most heartily in favor of labor unions so long as they had due regard for the interests of the public.

While Mr. Rockefeller testified a police lieutenant in uniform stood behind his chair and watched the crowd. Scattered around the room were a number of police detectives.

"The only coal property in Colorado in which we are in any way interested in is the Colorado Fuel and Iron company," Mr. Rockefeller said. "For me to have attempted to dictate a policy of control the situation would have meant an assumption of authority far beyond what the investment which I represent would have justified and if tolerated by the management of that company would have been resented by the other companies involved in the dispute." In his prepared statement he further said:

"Labor conditions, as far as they are within the control of a corporation, are matters for which the officers of the corporation are primarily responsible, and with which they, by reason of their experience and their first hand acquaintance with the facts are best qualified to deal.

"Combinations of capital are sometimes conducted in an unworthy manner, contrary to law and in disregard of the interests both of labor and the public. Such combinations cannot be too strongly condemned nor too vigorously dealt with.

"Although combinations of this kind are the exception, such publicity is generally given to their unsocial acts that all combinations of capital, however rightly managed or broadly beneficial, are thereby brought under suspicion. Likewise, it sometimes happens that combinations of labor are conducted without just regard for the rights of the employer or the public, and methods and practices adopted which, because unworthy or unlawful, are deserving of public censure.

"Doubtless mistakes have been made and conditions are still imperfect. I have no desire to defend any conditions that are justly subject to criticism; I only ask that the responsibility for them be apportioned fairly. As for the strike itself, its many distressing features have given me the deepest concern. I frankly confess that I felt there was something fundamentally wrong in a condition of affairs which rendered possible the loss of human lives, engendered hatred and bitterness, and brought suffering and privation upon hundreds of human beings.

"Without seeking to apportion the blame, I determined that, in so far as lay within my power, I would seek means of avoiding the possibility of similar conflicts arising elsewhere, or in the same industry in the future. It was in this way that I came to recommend to my colleagues in the Rockefeller Foundation the institution of a series of studies into the fundamental problems arising out of industrial relations, which resulted in securing the services of Mr. Mackenzie King, former minister of labor of Canada, to direct the studies."

After reading his statement, Mr. Rockefeller answered many questions regarding his various interests.

U. S. Protests to Carranza.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The state department instructed Consul Canada, at Vera Cruz, to make vigorous representations to General Carranza against the enforcement of Carranza's agrarian decree, the effect of which would be to wipe out investments amounting to millions of dollars, made by American, British, French and other foreigners in Mexican lands.

Held as Woman's Slayer.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 26.—Paul Van Horn was arrested here on the charge of having murdered Mrs. Mary Jane Fullmer, at Williamsport on Wednesday. The police say he was trying to pawn jewelry belonging to Mrs. Fullmer. With Van Horn was arrested his wife, Anna Van Horn, alias Anna Stroup, accused of being an accessory after the fact.

WILSON PHONES TO SAN FRANCISCO

President Inaugurates Across Country Service.

New York, Jan. 26.—"Hello, Mr. Moore," a voice said into a telephone receiver, and the wire passing through this city, which had been guarded over every mile of the thousands between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, was in use for the second time.

The voice was that of the president of the United States talking to Charles C. Moore, president of the Panama-Pacific Exposition, President Wilson being at his desk in the nation's capital, and Mr. Moore in San Francisco.

"This is indeed a pleasure," President Wilson said, and then added that he was looking forward to his trip to the coast and the exposition, when he would see Mr. Moore.

With Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, listening to the conversation from New York, and President Vail, of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, with his ear to a receiver at Jekyll Island, Ga., Mr. Wilson continued to speak over the first telephone line to be operated without a break from one coast to the other.

Still speaking to Mr. Moore, the president said:

"It appeals to the imagination to speak across the continent. It is a fine omen that the first thing it has done is to send its voice over from sea. I congratulate you on the fine prospects for a successful exposition. I am confidently hoping to take part in it after the adjournment of congress. May I not send my greetings to the management and to all whose work has made it possible and made it the great event it promises to be, and convey my personal congratulations to you?"

"It is a pleasure to be able to express my admiration for the inventive genius and scientific knowledge that have made this possible and my pride that this vital cord should have been stretched across America as a new symbol of our unity and our enterprise. Will you not convey my cordial congratulations to Dr. Bell? And I want to convey to you my personal congratulations, sir."

About March 1 the line will be ready for commercial use. The rates will be $20.70 for three minutes and $6.75 for each additional minute.

German Chancellor Declares

TRYING TO STARVE NATION

Von Bethmann-Hollweg Ridicules the Charges of Enemy Who Shells Unarmed African Cities—Maltreat Aliens in Camps.

Berlin, Jan. 26.—"In the future no one will be deceived by England's 'magnanimous appeals' in the name of civilization and humanity," said Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, at the German army field headquarters in a town in northern France.

The chancellor and the foreign minister, Gottlieb von Jagow, were seated in a villa which serves as the office and dwelling for themselves and the members of the diplomatic suite accompanying Emperor William abroad. Their views were sought with particular reference to British interference with American shipping and the British attitude toward foodstuffs shipped from America to Germany.

In this connection, the chancellor said no shipments of grain or other provisions had reached Germany from America since the war began.

"I shall not comment on the British note of Jan. 7, as far as facts and questions concerning trade are concerned," he said. "Sir Edward Grey, however, considered it appropriate to add two statements intended to carry weight far beyond the scope of this particular interchange of notes.

"I mean the paragraph wherein he speaks of leaving open the question of permitting shipments of food supplies not intended for the enemy's armies or government and his slur on us, stating that he had abandoned the rules of civilization and humanity.

"It should not be forgotten that in this war England set out to starve over 65,000,000 people: directly by cutting off their food; indirectly by closing the arteries of their commerce. In attempting this, she did not refrain from destroying a considerable part of the trade of neutral nations. Now it is beginning to dawn on Great Britain that she cannot force us to submission by these methods.

"When our vessels successfully bombarded towns on the east coast of England—towns equipped with defenses, arsenals, batteries and other military establishments, despite all statements to the contrary from London—no powerful fleet appeared to defend the coast; but England was made to rise up in indignation about our lack of civilization. Recruiting lists bulged with new names, and reports were spread which shook the world with horror over our alleged infamy.

"Now, is not this rather audacious diplomatic journalism, in view of the fact that British vessels bombarded the open cities of Dares-Salaam, Victoria and Swakopmund (German East Africa) and have again bombarded towns on the Belgian coast without previous announcement, thereby destroying private dwellings of the allies, without regard to who might be living there? Or when Great Britain supplies troops with rifles and ammunition which only outwardly correspond to the rules of The Hague?"

"Bullets were found by us with the core constructed in two parts, in such a manner that in loading his rifle a soldier may easily wrench off the point of the projectile by inserting it in a share-edged hole drilled in a lever attached to the gun.

"Thus dumdum ammunition with a soft lead core has been produced in large quantities. We have in our possession many such rifles, still loaded with dumdum ammunition.

"Thousands of German women and children and a few old men have returned from France—many are still there—who for months have suffered in French concentration camps most inhuman treatment. Most of them received only bread and dirty water for weeks. Many had nothing to eat for days at a time. The sanitary arrangements cannot be discussed. They were so indecent and filthy.

"No hostile civilian was put into a concentration camp in Germany until November, when it was found necessary to retaliate against the British and the French. No British, French or Russian woman was ever put into a concentration camp in Germany."

ALLIES ADVANCE AT BERRY-AU-BAC

Violent Fighting Resumed Along Front in West.

London, Jan. 26.—The destruction of German bridges across the Meuse river and the capture by the allies of a line of German trenches at Berry-au-Bac were the leading events in a day of increased activity in the western theater of war.

Berlin dispatches admit the loss of trenches at Berry-au-Bac, but claim to have inflicted severe losses on the French in Alsace.

According to late dispatches from upper Alsace, the struggle at Hartmannswiller Kopt, between four and five miles north of Steinbach, is still in progress, with the French on the offensive.

There are indications that another fight is developing for the possession of the heights of the Aisne, northeast of Soissons. The French shelled the German positions all day Sunday.

This is expected to be an important week in the operations in the western theater of war. There is good reason to believe the invaders will try to give the Kaiser a victory for a birthday gift on Wednesday. French and British armies have reported important German concentrations in west Flanders and along the German center during the past three days.

The French official statement is issued in Paris says:

"In Belgium we have made slight progress at a point to the east of St. Georges; on the rest of this front there were artillery duels Sunday.

"From the Lys to the Oise there was Sunday an intermittent cannonading.

"On the front along the Aisne there is nothing to report, except that at the Berry-au-Bac a counter attack of the enemy was repulsed and the disputed trenches remain in our possession.

"In Champagne we have demolished several field works and protections of the enemy.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of La Grurie, a very spirited fusillade was stopped by the efficient shooting of our batteries.

"On the Meuse, the destruction of the bridges of St. Mihiel was accompanied by our artillery.

"In Lorraine, at Embervill, we surprised a detachment of Bavarian troops and took some of them prisoners."

GERMANY MAKES PROTEST

Objects to American Firms Supplying Allies With Hydro-Aeroplanes.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Germany protested to the state department, through her ambassador, Count Bernstorff, against shipments of American hydro-aeroplanes to the European belligerents, on the ground that such craft are war vessels.

A statement issued by the embassy says:

"The Curtiss works at Hammondsport, N. Y., have sold and sent to England the well known hydro-aeroplane 'America' and five hydro-aeroplanes of the same type. Thirty-six hydro-aeroplanes of a different type have been ordered by England and are under construction by the same firm. Also Russia has ordered a number of these vessels from Curtiss for use in her navy."

The embassy statement points out that hydro-aeroplanes are not especially mentioned in The Hague agreement prohibiting neutrals from supplying belligerents with war craft, for the simple reason that this kind of war vessels did not yet exist at that time.

CHORAL SOCIETY

Music Loving People of Town Have Great Treat.

The Gettysburg Choral Society is offering a rare musical privilege to the community. Not one town of this size in a hundred possesses such an organization with the capable leadership, both vocal and instrumental, of this.

The members are being led into pleasant fields and granted treats by way of surprise. They are singing "The Bridal Chorus" from Mr. F. T. Cowan's "Rose Maiden"; Fanning's "The Miller's Wooing"; and "Be Not Afraid," from Mendelssohn's Elijah. They are about to take up for advance work, Pierné's "Serenade." Merely naming these selections is sufficient to explain the interest each meeting creates.

Last Thursday, Mr. Sammel favored the Society with a well-rendered violin solo, "Benediction," by Haweis, and responded to the enthusiastic applause with an encore.

The organization is preparing for a concert of a very high order, which will be given at the end of the term.

All members and any who propose to join this work are expected to be present at the meeting Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the High School without fail.

FROM WAR FRONT HUMAN INTEREST

Rich Aunt Demanded Real Heroism From Nephew.
Devotion of Dog
For Master.

FROM numerous sources stories from the front in the European war are reaching this country. The devotion of a dog for his wounded master is described in a letter just received in New York city from Laurence V. Benet, a member of the committee of management of the American ambulance hospital in Paris:

"A very interesting case turned up a few days ago. A private soldier of a zouave regiment was severely wounded near the Belgian frontier. When he left Algiers he was followed by his dog, a very handsome white and liver colored setter, and this dog followed his company throughout the campaign and into the trenches, every night sharing his master's blanket, so that they managed to keep fairly warm and comfortable together. During a violent bombardment by the German artillery a heavy shell struck the parapet of the trench, killing about a dozen men and burying this man deeply under the earth. The dog managed to dig him out, exposing his face, before he was completely suffocated, and then managed to call the attention of men in the adjacent trench by seizing their clothing with his teeth and dragging them toward his buried master. The man was finally dug out and was found to be very badly wounded with fragments of shell, pebbles and pieces of earth that were driven into his body. He has lost one leg so far, and we may have to take the other off."

"The dog managed to force his way into the hospital train and reached Aubervilliers, near Paris, where man and dog were brought into our hospital with one of our ambulances. I had a kennel built for the dog, and he is now living near the kitchen and visits his master in the ward once or twice a day. It is really touching to see his devotion and his evident distress at his master's suffering."

Boasts of Twenty-six Wounds.
There is a friendly rivalry among the wounded in the Berlin hospitals for the distinction of having the worst shot up man in the war. One who claims twenty-six wounds holds the present record, but Horst Pfeiffer is envied for his remarkable combination of peril and luck.

Near Dixmude he received an order which he was to take on his bicycle to the firing line. He had to pass on his way a road that was exposed to a hot machine gun fire from the enemy. He was hit eight times and dropped off into a ditch at the side of the road, but succeeded nevertheless in handing his message to another soldier, who carried it to its destination. One bullet had grazed his skull, another passed through the upper jaw, one through the chin, one through the bone of the right arm, and one struck his left wrist. Two others struck his helmet and his shoes. His comrades finally succeeded in rescuing him from his dangerous position and sent him to Berlin, where he has been awarded an iron cross.

Auntie Wanted Real Hero.
An automobile drove up at the Quai d'Orsay, says Le Rire, and the chauffeur, a young man well groomed, shared to perfection, wearing the uniform of a private and with a brassard on his arm bearing the letter A (auto service), jumped out and embraced an elderly woman who was walking alone.

"My dear aunt! How are you? It is four months since I have seen you."
"Yes, I only got back to Paris yesterday. And you, my dear boy, how proud of you I am!"
"You ought to be. There are not many fellows who have gone through what I have."

"Tell me."
"In the first place, I was not anxious to carry a knapsack and trudge along. So I volunteered for service with my automobile and was at once accepted. Then came the first setback. They wanted to put a machine gun in the tonneau. I did not care for that sort of work, so I bought another machine, a light runabout, and abandoned my fifty horsepower. It cost 20,000 francs ($4,000), but my skin is worth that. The little machine struck the eye of a general in charge of a fortified camp and he made me his chauffeur. Fine. But at the end of September he caught cold and began to complain of the air at high speed."

"I said to myself, 'He is going to leave me for a closed machine.' In war, you know, one needs resolution and energy. I displayed both. I bought another machine, a big limousine, fitted de luxe, with a light motor, running smoothly and slowly. It tickled him to death. It cost me 30,000 francs ($6,000) more, but what of that? My skin is worth it. So now, you see, my dear aunt, how your nephew excelled himself from difficult situations."

"And you really carried all this out yourself, my dear?"
"I certainly did, aunt."
"Tell me, my boy, you expect to be my heir, don't you?"
"I certainly hope so, my dear aunt, particularly after all these expenses."

"Well, remember, I am a woman of my word. If you do not leave your automobiles and your generals and the rest of your coddling, and if you don't try to get yourself killed before this war is over you shall not get a cent."

And the indignant dowager moved off, head in air.

His Wife's Allowance.

Illustrative of the social leveling influence of war, the following incident is told of two Englishmen:

A new commanding officer was questioning a smart young corporal. "Are you married?" asked the officer. "Yes, sir."

"Don't you think you ought to make her some allowance out of your pay?" continued the officer.

"If you think it necessary, sir," replied the private, "I will, sir. I'm keeping up the house and car and allowing her £1000 a year, but if you think an extra sixpence a day would be any good to her I am perfectly willing."

War Redeems an Apache.

Not long before the war a notorious apache asked a Paris police captain for a job as stool pigeon, burglary being dull for the moment. The captain accepted, whereupon the apache held out his hand, but the captain turned away.

The other day the captain got a postcard from the apache at the front. It read:

"You refused to shake my hand lately. You were quite right. But now I think you'd consent to shake my hand, for I've only one left."

The captain admits he would shake hands now.

Put Batteries In White.

A device by which the Germans have helped winter mask their batteries in the field in northern France is described in a letter written to the Frankfurter Zeitung by a journalist now serving as an artillery officer at the front.

For weeks, he said, the German batteries in shifting positions had been hurling their iron hail against the French near Lille. Then snow fell, covering the landscape with white. In vain the French officers on observation sought to discover the German batteries as on the day before by watching for the sun glint on the metal parts. Everywhere there was but an unbroken stretch of white.

The Germans, the writer explains, had turned each battery into white by wrapping the wheels and gun carriage with white towels, sheets and curtains and stretching a white sheet in front of it. Suddenly a central patch in the white sheet was drawn away, and the white nose of the cannon was pointed upward through it. The very artilleryman who touched it off, the correspondent adds, was dressed in white from top to toe in a ludicrous look of nightgown, and the entire battery and its crew were quite indistinguishable amid the white of the snow covered landscape.

Kept Diary of Anguish.

For ten nights during the recent heavy fighting in the vicinity of Ypres the soldiers in the opposing trenches listened to the plaintive cry of a wounded man. The trenches on both sides of a narrow, muddy canal were not more than 100 yards apart. Both Germans and French knew the cry was that of a wounded man in need of water.

Whenever a German or a Frenchman tried to creep out of a trench to reach the sufferer bullets found the would be rescuer. On the tenth day the battle tide rolled onward, and the French found in a hollow a German officer, his head pillowed on a knapsack, an open diary by his side. A smile was on his face. Between the leaves of the diary was a photograph of his wife and two little children.

A bayonet had pierced him through, but for nine days and nights before the end came he had devoted his ebbing strength to writing a record of anguish, physical and mental.

The diary has been sent to the lady of the photograph. On a blank page a French commander has written, "To the wife of a noble gentleman who died a hero."

Earl Thrice Wounded.

Lieutenant the Earl of Kingston, of the First Irish guards, ought, according to his own estimate, to be dead. He is now lying at the military hospital, Denmark hill, in southeast London, suffering from the effects of three bullet wounds and a fractured thigh. Telling him that came about, he said:

started shelling again. Our guns answered their fire, but there was no sign of an attack. The howitzers, however, had our range exactly. Suddenly I saw the Gordons retiring, followed by thousands of Germans. We could do nothing. If we shot there was as much chance of killing our own men as the enemy, as they seemed all mixed up—Gordons, Oxford's and Germans.

"They were enfilading our trenches, so we drew back on our left fifty yards and I made our men start throwing up a lie down trench as best they could, but the enemy turned a Maxim on us and I went down before it was completed. I had a rotten time. They shot at me on the ground, and shells burst all round. I had had my hat shot away before I fell. Then my sergeant and a drummer carried me away. I hear since both chaps have been killed. It seems wonderful to be alive. Even when our medical officer was dressing me two shells came through the roof and he dropped my injured leg. How it did hurt! And, poor chap, he got covered with boiling water. I am afraid there are few left in the regiment."

Knew Where It Would End.

An officer attached to the British headquarters in a letter to his wife writes:

"In war the views and ideas of your enemy are at least as instructive and interesting as any comments you may hear from your own people. Therefore the following notions from the lips of a German officer recently captured are certainly worthy of your consideration, as the conclusion he drew contained a strong element of common sense."

"He was asked how long he thought the war would last. He replied that he was unable to form a definite opinion, but that he would be very pleased to prophesy where it would end. So he was asked to proceed and then said, 'Within forty yards of where I was captured.'"

What Worried Him.

Maurice Donnay has received at the French academy a letter from a friend in a dugout at the front. It contained not a word about the fighting or the "Jack Johnsons" or the weather in the trenches. The writer was troubled about only one thing—he was afraid that the academy, which has been revising its dictionary of the French language for about three years, might have already reached the letter "L" and about one word under the letter "L" this orthographer in the trenches holds strong views.

The word is that commonly and, according to him, wrongly written "in-livable" (unbearable). He implored M. Donnay to bring all his influence to bear upon the academy to insure the word being written "lissable" in the revised edition of the dictionary. That was the only topic he wrote about. It was apparently the one uppermost in his mind.

M. Donnay assured him that the academy was working on the letter "L" and that the war would be over long before it got to "L."

Pictures Night Alarm.

The modern battlefield at night does not lack picturesqueness, according to a German officer whose opportunities to be impressed have been many. In a letter to a friend he wrote:

"Being on observation duty at night is not as lonely a job as you think. Time passes very quickly. There are lights, however, when every minute seems an hour. All that depends upon circumstances and your own frame of mind."

"War here is more intense than it is in the east. My observation post lies close to the lines of the French on a hill. From there I report the movements of the enemy and direct our artillery fire. Over me fly hundreds of shells and shrapnel from both sides."

"A shower of them came last night. Until about 10 o'clock all was quiet. From out of the night came the usual battlefield noises, if noises one could call them. Somewhere men spoke in an undertone, what language I don't know. Then came the sound of footfalls. A man coughed in a suppressed manner, and the steps of another were recorded by the faint voice of two metallic substances striking together. Then the steps and other sounds vanished, and I replaced my revolver."

"There was nothing to be seen until to my right the rifles in a French trench began to sputter. Little tongues of purplish fire seemed to leap across the ground, and through the air went the wall of thousands of bullets. What the shot at I could not discover—false alarm, of course. But they kept it up valiantly, and the excitement communicated itself to the trenches in front of me and to those beyond on my left."

"Headquarters wanted to know what was the matter. After confessing my ignorance I returned to my task of observing things in the dark. Soon the fire became general. The battlefield assumed an aspect which I would call beautifully terrible. There were moments when it resembled a large city in which the inhabitants passed the night by pulling up and down the shutters of their windows. Of a sudden whole rows of houses would be lighted up, as the men in the trenches fired volleys. For a moment a part of this city would be in utter darkness, and then would rise from it the columns of fire emitted by the howitzer batteries. The pillars of fire would rise almost perpendicularly, giving the impression that you were looking upon a vast number of steel ovens."

"For the greater part of an hour the thrashing continued. Then the fire breaks lessened in volume and frequency and finally died out altogether."

Do Your Best.

Doctors Using Amolox With Great Success

Endorsed By Leading Druggist.
Amolox, the new remedy for eczema and all diseases of the skin, is curing thousands of eczema sufferers that have been unable to find relief after trying everything else. A well-known physician, who had a patient with a bad case of eczema of the scalp,—head almost entirely covered with scaly sores—rapidly becoming bald, reported after one week's treatment, that the hair stopped falling out, scalp was rapidly healing and a new growth of healthy hair starting. Quoting the exact words of the doctor, "That Amolox is great stuff."

Amolox when applied to the skin stops all itching and burning instantly. Will cure eczema and all skin troubles and will clear up a muddy complexion, or pimples on face in 24 hours.

All sufferers, from eczema, salt rheum, tetter, acne, barber's itch and pimples on the face should go to their druggists at once and get a bottle of Amolox and box ointment. If you are not satisfied, it will not cost you a cent. The People's Drug Store will refund your money if not satisfactory. Trial size 50 cents.

PEOPLE'S DRUG STORE WILL SELL

COUGH MEDICINE AT HALF PRICE

A GOOD CHANCE TO ECONOMIZE

The public will be given a chance to economize on their cough medicine today and tomorrow, as People's Drug Store, Balto., Md., will sell a 50c bottle of Schiffmann's Concentrated Expectorant for 25c to the first 100 who apply at the store, but only one bottle to each family. The proprietor is losing money on every bottle sold at this price, but has decided to make this reduction, so as to give those who have not yet used this excellent remedy an opportunity of trying it, at partially his expense, as he knows that no other medicine will be used by anyone who has once tried it. Those who have not already used this remedy are thus afforded an opportunity of trying it for half price and can obtain a bottle for 25c today or tomorrow, by presenting the coupon below at People's Drug Store. Even though not in need of such a medicine at present, it will pay to obtain a bottle now at half price, as no doubt someone in the family will require it before the winter is over, but will not have another chance of buying for less than full price. This is now, simply, pleasant remedy is also guaranteed to relieve the worst Cough or Cold, and is excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough and Hoarseness. (One bottle makes a full pint (16 ounces) by simply mixing it at home with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of water. It makes a whole family supply, and as much as would ordinarily cost from $2.00 to $3.00 for the same quantity of the ordinary, old fashioned, ready-made kinds of Cough Syrup of doubtful merit. It is prepared from strictly harmless plants and is so pleasant that children like to take it and it can be given them with perfect safety, as it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or any other narcotic, as do most cough mixtures. Besides, absolutely no risk whatever is run in buying this remedy as People's Drug Store will refund you 25c if it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the very best remedy ever used for any of the above complaints. Persons calling after these 100 bottles are sold or living out of the city, where it cannot be obtained at a local drugstore will not be disappointed but will be sent a bottle, postpaid, upon receipt of the coupon and 25c, providing they write to the proprietor today. Address R. J. Schiffmann, 205 W. 6th St., St. Paul, Minn.

TWENTY-FIVE CENT COUPON—NO. 1

This coupon and 25c is good for one (only) 50c bottle of Schiffmann's Concentrated Expectorant at People's Drug Store, if presented today or tomorrow, and your name and address is filled in.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Warrington, an American adventurer, and James, his servant, with a parrot, the bird known as Parrot & Co., travel along the road to the landing, bound for Rangoon to cash a draft for $20,000.

CHAPTER II.—Elsa, Chetwood, rich American girl tourist, sees Warrington come aboard the boat at the landing and, amazed at his likeness to her fiancé, Arthur Ellison, asks the parrot to introduce her. Conservative English passengers are shocked at her breach of the conventionalities.

CHAPTER III.—The parrot tells Elsa that Warrington, the outcast adventurer, has beaten a syndicate and sold his oil claims for $20,000. Warrington puts Rajah, the parrot, through his tricks for Elsa and warns her against acquaintance with unknown adventurers—himself, in fact.

CHAPTER IV.—Warrington and Elsa pass two golden days together on the river. Martha, Elsa's companion, warns her that there is gossip.

CHAPTER V.—In Rangoon Warrington banks his draft, pays old debts, and while settling with James in his old lodgings overhears and interferes in a row over cards in the next room.

CHAPTER VI.—Warrington finds that the row in the next room is caused by an enemy, Newell Craig, and threatens to shoot him unless he leaves town. Elsa goes for a walk with Martha, is annoyed by Craig and stabs him with a hatpin. Warrington bids Elsa good-by. She does not tell him that she is to sail on the same ship for Singapore.

CHAPTER VII.—Martha writes to Arthur Ellison of the rapidly growing friendship between Elsa and the outcast adventurer. Warrington discusses the American on the Singapore steamer and realizes his hopeless love and his duty to protect her against himself. Elsa tells him of her engagement.

CHAPTER VIII.—Warrington avoids Elsa, who thinks he may be ill and makes inquiries, regardless of the misinterpretation of her concern. Craig is aboard, is warned by Warrington, and calls him Paul, so letting him know that his chivalry and loyalty of ten years before have gone for nothing.

CHAPTER IX.—Warrington ceases to avoid Elsa. Craig stirs up evil gossip. Elsa tells Warrington of the hatpin incident and he lets her know that his chivalry and loyalty of ten years before have gone for nothing.

CHAPTER X.—Warrington turns the hose on Craig. He tells Elsa that he is a man under a cloud and to be avoided, but Elsa refuses to let the cut direct from social passengers.

CHAPTER XI.—At Penang Mallow, who drove Warrington from his plantation when he learned his story, comes aboard. Warrington tells Elsa that Mallow and Craig both will tell that he spent money that did not belong to him over the gambling table at Rangoon, and asks her not to speak to him again.

CHAPTER XII.

The Game of Gossip.

During the concluding days of the voyage Elsa had her meals served on deck. She kept Martha with her continually, promenaded only early in the morning and at night while the other passengers were at dinner. This left a clear deck. She walked quickly, her arm in Martha's, literally propelling her along, never spoke unless spoken to, and then answered in monosyllables. Her thoughts flew to a thousand and one things, futilely and vainly, in the endeavor to shut out the portrait of the broken man. What was he doing, of what was he thinking, where would he go and what would he do? She hated night which, no longer offering sleep, provided nothing in lieu of it, and compelled her to remain in the stuffy cabin. She was afraid.

Early Wednesday morning she passed Craig and Mallow; but the two had wit enough to step aside for her and to speak only with their eyes. She filled Craig with unadulterated fear. Mallow dragged along the gambler whenever he found a chance to see Elsa at close range.

"There's a woman, Gad! that beach-comber has taste."

"I tell you to look out for her," Craig warned again. "I know what I'm talking about."

Mallow whistled. "Oho! You probably acted the fool. Drinking?"

Craig nodded affirmatively.

"Thought so. Even a Yokohama barmaid will fight shy of a boozier. I'm going to meet her when we get to Singapore, or my name's not Mallow."

Craig laughed with malice. "I hope you will. It will take some of the brag out of you. Say, let's go aft and hunt up the chap. I understand he's taken up quarters in the second cabin."

"Doesn't want to run into me. All right; come on. We'll stir him up a little and have some fun."

They found Warrington up in the stern, sitting on the deck, surrounded by squatting Lascars, some Chinamen and a solitary white man, the chief engineer's assistant. The center of interest was Rajah, who was performing his tricks. Among these was one that the bird rarely could be made to perform, the threading of beads. He desisted this act, as it entailed the putting of a blunt needle in his beak. He flung it aside each time Warrington handed it to him. But ever his master patiently returned it. At length, recognizing that the affair might be prolonged indefinitely, Rajah put two beads on the thread and tossed it aside. The Lascars jabbered, the Chinamen grinned, and the chief engineer's assistant swore approvingly. The parrot shrilled and waddled back to his cage.

"Fine business for a whole man!"

Warrington looked up to meet the cynical eyes of Mallow. He took out his cutty and fired it. Otherwise he did not move nor let his gaze swerve. Mallow, towering above him, could scarcely resist the temptation to stir his enemy with the toe of his boot. His hatred for Warrington was not shared due to his brutal treatment of him. Mallow always took pleasure in dominating those under him by fear. Warrington had done his work well. He had always recognized Mallow as his employer, but in no other capacity; he had never offered to smoke a pipe with him, or to take a hand at cards or split a bottle. It had not been done offensively; but in this attitude Mallow had recognized his manager's disapproval of him, an inner consciousness of superiority in birth and education. He had with supreme satisfaction ordered him off the plantation that memorable night. Weak as the man had been in body, there had been no indication of weakness in spirit.

Occultly Warrington read the desire in the other's eyes. "I shouldn't do it, Mallow," he said. "I shouldn't. Nothing would please me better than to have a good excuse to chuck you over the rail. Upon a time you had the best of me. I was a sick man then. I'm in tolerable good health at present."

"You crow, I could break you like a pipe stem," Mallow rambled his hands into his coat pockets, scowling contemptuously. He weighed fully twenty pounds more than Warrington.

Crow! Warrington shrugged. In the East Crow is a rough synonym for thief.

"You're at liberty to return to your diggings forward with that impression," he replied coolly. "When we get to Singapore," rising slowly to his height until his eyes were level with Mallow's, "when we get to Singapore, I'm going to ask you for that fifty pounds, earned in honest labor."

"And if I decline to pay?" truculently.

"We'll talk that over when we reach port. Now," roughly, "get out. There won't be any baiting done today, thank you."

"Cockalorum!" jeered Mallow. Craig touched his sleeve, but he threw off the hand roughly. He was one of the best rough and tumble fighters in the Straits settlements. "You thieving beach-comber, I don't want to mess up the deck with you, but I'll cut your comb for you when we get to port."

Warrington laughed insolently and picked up the parrot cage. "I'll bring the comb. In fact, I always carry it." Not a word to Craig, not a glance in his direction. Warrington stepped to the companionway and went below.

Craig could not resist grinning at Mallow's discomfiture. "Wouldn't break, eh?"

"Shut your mouth! The sneaking dock-walloper, I'll take the starch out of him when we land! Always had that high and mighty air. Wants folks to think he's a gentleman!"

"He was once," said Craig. "No use giving you advice; but he's not a healthy individual to bait. I'm no kitten when it comes to scrapping; but I haven't any desire to mix things with him." The fury of the man who had given him the ducking was still vivid. He had been handled as a terrier handles a rat.

"I tell you he's yellow. And with a hundred thousand in his clothes, he'll be yellower still."

A hundred thousand. Craig frowned and gazed out to sea. He had forgotten all about the windfall. "Let's go and have a peg," he suggested surlily.

Immediately upon obtaining her rooms at Raffles hotel in Singapore (and leaving Martha there to await the arrival of the luggage, an imposing collection of trunks and boxes and kitbags), Elsa went down to the American consulate, which had its offices in the rear of the hotel. She walked through the outer office and stood silently at the consul general's elbow, waiting for him to look up. She was dressed in white, and in the pugree of her helmet was the one touch of color, Rajah's blue feather. The consul general turned his head. His kindly face had the settled expression of indulgent inquiry. The expression changed swiftly into one of delight.

"Elsa Chetwood!" he cried, seizing her hands. "Well, well! I am glad to see you. Good gracious what a beautiful woman you've turned out to be! Sit down, sit down!" He pushed her into a chair. "Well, well! When I saw you last you were nineteen."

"What a frightful memory you have! And I was going to my first ball. You used the same adjective."

"Is there a better one? I'll use it if there is. You've arrived just in time. I am giving a little dinner to the consuls and their wives tonight. You see, I've an old friend from India in town today, and I've asked him, too. Your appearance evens up matters."

"Oh; then I'm just a flatterer!"

"Heavens, no! You're the most important person of the lot, though Colonel Knowlton!"

"Colonel Knowlton!" exclaimed Elsa.

"That's so, by George! Stupid of me. You came down on the same boat. Fine! You know each other."

Elsa straightened her lips with some difficulty. She possessed the enviable faculty of instantly forming in her mind pictures of coming events. The little swelling veins in the colonel's nose were as plain to her mind's eye as if he really stood before her. "Have him take me to dinner," she suggested.

"What was I thinking of?"

In the East Crow is a Rough Synonym for Thief!

clared the unsuspecting man. "If any one can draw out the colonel, it will be you."

"I'll do my best." Elsa's mind was full of rollicking malice.

Contemplatively he said: "So you've been doing the Orient alone? You are like your father in that way. He was never afraid of anything. Your mental makeup, too, I'll wager is like his. Finest man in the world."

"Wasn't he? How I wish he could have always been with me! But why is it, everyone seems appalled that I should travel over here without male escort?"

"The answer lies in your mirror, Elsa. Your old nurse Martha is no real protection."

"Are men so bad, then?"

"They are less restrained. The heat, the tremendous distances, the lack of amusements, are perhaps responsible. By the way, here's a packet of letters for you."

"Thanks." Elsa played with the packet, savoring the superscriptions. The old disorder came back into her mind. Three of the letters were from Arthur. She dreaded to open them. "I must be going, then. I'm not sure of my tickets to Hong-kong."

"Go straight to the German Lloyd office. I'll have my boy show you the way. Chong!" he called. A bright-eyed young Chinese came in quickly. "Show him German Lloyd office. All same quick."

In the outer office she paused for a moment or so to look at the magazines and weeklies from home. The Chinese boy, grinning pleasantly, peered curiously at Elsa's beautiful hands. She heard someone enter, and quite naturally glanced up. The newcomer was Mallow. He stared at her, smiled familiarly and lifted his helmet.

Elsa, with cold unflickering eyes, offered his greeting no recognition whatever. The man felt that she was looking through him, inside of him, searching out all the dark corners of his soul. He dropped his gaze, confused. Then Elsa calmly turned to the boy.

"Come, Chong."

There was something in the manner of her exit that infinitely puzzled him. It was the insolence of the well-bred, but he did not know it. To offend his chagrin and confusion, he put on his helmet and passed into the private office. She was out of his range of understanding.

Mallow was an American by birth but had grown up in the Orient, hardly. In his youth he had been beaten and trampled upon, and now that he had become rich in Ceylon (the dried kernels of coconuts from which oil is made), he in his turn beat and trampled. It was the only law he knew. Ordinarily, when in Penang and Singapore, he behaved himself, drank circumspectly and shunned promiscuous companions. But when he did drink heartily, he was a man to be aware of.

He hailed the consul general cordially and offered him one of his really choice cigars, which was accepted.

"I say, who was that young woman who just went out?"

The consul general laid down the cigar. The question itself was harmless enough; it was Mallow's way of clothing it he resented. "Why?" he asked.

"She's a stunner. Just curious if you knew her, that's all. We came down on the same boat. Handed if I shouldn't like to meet her. Do you know her?" eagerly.

"I do. More than that, I have always known her. She is the daughter of the late General Chetwood, one of the greatest civil engineers of our time. When he died he left her several millions. She is a remarkable young woman, a famous beauty, known favorably in European courts, and I can't begin to tell you how many other accomplishments she has."

"Well, stump me!" returned Mallow. "Is she a free-thinker?"

"What the devil is that? What do you mean?"

"Only this, if she's all you say she is, why does she pick out an absconder for a friend, a chap who dare not show his phiz in the states? I heard the tale from a man once employed in his office back in New York. A beach-comber, a dock-walloper, if there ever was one."

"Hold your horses, my friend. What I'm telling you is on the level. She's been hobnobbing with the fellow all the way down from the Irrawaddy, so I'm told. Never spoke to anyone else. Made him sit at her side at table and jabbered Italian at him, as if he didn't want others to know what she was talking about. I know the man. Fired him from my plantation, when I found out what he was. Can't recall his name just now, but he is known out here as Warrington; Parrot & Co."

The consul general was genuinely shocked.

"You can't blame me for thinking things," went on Mallow. "What man wouldn't? Ask her about Warrington. You'll find that I'm telling the truth, all right."

"If you are, then she has made one of those mistakes women make when they travel alone. I shall see her at tea and talk to her. But I do not thank you, Mallow, for telling me this. A finer, lovelier-hearted girl doesn't live. She might have been kind out of sympathy."

Mallow bit off the tip of his cigar. "He's a handsome beggar, if you want to know."

"I resent that tone. Better drop the subject before I lose my temper. I'll have your papers ready for you in the morning." The consul general caught up his pen savagely to indicate that the interview was at an end.

"All right," said Mallow good-naturedly. "I meant no harm. Just naturally curious. Can't blame me."

"I'm not blaming you. But it has disturbed me, and I wish to be alone to think it over."

Mallow lounged out, rather pleased with himself. His greatest pleasure in life was in making others uncomfortable.

The consul general bit the wooden end of his pen and chewed the splinters of cedar. He couldn't deny that it was like Elsa to pick up some derelict for her benefactions. Women had no business to travel alone. It was all very well when they toured in parties of eight or ten; but for a charming young woman like Elsa, attended by a spinster companion who doubtless dared not offer advice, it was decidedly wrong. And thereupon he determined that her trip to Yokohama should find her well guarded.

"I beg your pardon," said a pleasant voice.

The consul general had been so deeply occupied by his worry that he had not noticed the entrance of the speaker. He turned impatiently. He saw a tall blond man, bearded and tanned, with fine clear blue eyes that met his with the equanimity of the fearless.

DESIRABLE HOME AND #### MILL PROPERTY

The undersigned will offer at public sale his valuable property in Frederick County, one half mile west of Harney, on WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27th, 1915, at 1 o'clock, p. m., well known as the "Myers' Mill Property," containing 15 acres of land adjoining the lands of Judson Hill, and R. G. Shoemaker. The improvements consist of a good 2-story frame dwelling with eight rooms, with summer kitchen attached, slate roof; a good barn and all necessary out-buildings. Also a large mill, 2-story, stone and weatherboarded, containing the latest improved machinery, three stands of rolls, the same run either by water or steam power, and having a good trade. This is an excellent property, in good condition in every way, and a fine chance for the right man.

AUSTRIANS HALT CZAR IN GALICIA

Mass Along 300-Mile Front and Hurl Back Russians.

B.G. BATTLE IS RAGING

Vienna Reports the Repulse of the Muscovites and Check of Bukovina's Advance.

London, Jan. 26.—Battling desperately to drive the forces through the Austrian lines in Bukovina, the Russians, according to reports from Vienna, have met with a reverse in their campaign in that section and are now on the defensive.

A new attack on the czar's armies has been initiated by the Austrian forces, in conjunction with the Germans in the east, and a violent attack has been launched along the 300-mile battle front.

Heavy fighting is in progress along that line, but so far as is known, no decisive results have been achieved as yet. Official dispatches from Vienna say that the Russians were driven back with heavy losses of munitions and prisoners and the Russian army was in retreat.

The object of this attack apparently is to relieve Hungary from further danger of invasion by clearing the Russians from Galicia, Bukovina and northern Hungary.

Desperate fighting at close quarters is in progress in central Poland, where many men have died from the cold. Official reports from Berlin, by wireless from the German headquarters, indicate that there is in progress a Russian movement of considerable size to the north of Warsaw, in the neighborhood of Przasnysz. German military experts are at a loss to predict whether this movement means that the Russians are proceeding on a new line of campaign. It is believed that this army of the czar is working in co-operation with the vast force that is menacing the Teutons in East Prussia and northern Poland, and that General von Hindenburg will have to abandon all attempts to get through the Russian lines to Warsaw for the present.

Dispatches from Petrograd say that in Galicia, between the rivers Vistula and Jasiolka, approximately thirty miles east of the Dunajec river, General Brojevit, commander of the fourth Austrian army, has undertaken a forward movement in the direction of Przemyśl.

Whether this is an attempt to relieve Przemyśl, which has been under siege for several months, or to force the Russians to withdraw from Bukovina, is not yet clear.

Simultaneous attacks are recorded on the Russian positions in Bukovina, in the vicinity of Kimpulung, and in the south Polish provinces of Radom and Kielce, along the line from Kowlodz to Koneskie, and thence to Sokow, where heavy artillery engagements have occurred.

Northward there appears to have been little change. Northwest of Warsaw, from Radzanow to Dobryzn, on the Vistula, the Germans are still on the defensive. On the left bank of the Vistula, west of Warsaw, and about the Rakwa the Germans are stubbornly attempting to advance. Between Borghimow and Gumin, twenty-five miles west of Warsaw, desperate hand to hand fighting is reported. The village of Borghimow has changed hands several times as the armies surged back and forth. At last reports it was not occupied by either side, as neither of the opposing forces is able to hold the town.

AIRMAN DESTROYS 400 AUTOS

British Aviator Dropped Bomb on Repair Shop in Raid on Essen.

Amsterdam, Jan. 26.—The British air raid last week on the town of Essen resulted in the destruction of 400 war automobiles, according to a correspondent of the Handelsblad.

These cars were in a repair shop which was wrecked by the British bombs. The loss of the shop and its elaborate equipment is described as a serious blow, and the Germans have had to take over a private motor car factory at Aix-la-Chapelle, where hundreds of Dutch workmen have obtained employment.

BRITISH ARMORED SHIP LOST

Vessel Either Struck Mine or Foundered Off Irish Coast.

London, Jan. 26.—It was officially announced at the Admiralty that the British armored merchant vessel Vektor had been lost off Ireland, with all hands. The vessel, it was stated, had either struck a mine or foundered.

Austria Won't Yield Inch.

Vienna, Jan. 26.—The Wiener Tageblatt, which is the mouthpiece of the foreign office, credits to Foreign Minister Burian a statement that he will refuse territorial concessions to Italy and Rumania, even if such a course makes inevitable the intervention of these states on the side of Great Britain, France and Russia.

Turk Air Fleet Destroyed.

Petrograd, Jan. 26.—The entire aeroplane fleet of the Turks, which was being sent to Trebizond for use against the Russians in the Caucasus, was destroyed when the Russian Black sea fleet sank the steamship Georgius off Sinoub. The vessel carried six air craft.

U. S. TAKES STAND ON CONSULS IN BELGIUM

Willing to Discuss Continuance of Service With Germany.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The United States has sent a formal note to Germany, which, without discussing the sovereignty of Belgium, expresses a willingness to make such arrangements as may be necessary with the German military authorities in de facto control of Belgian territory, for the continuance of American consular service there.

Although the first note from Germany did not explicitly raise the issue, officials of the Washington government, in making their reply, carefully avoided any expression which could be construed as a political recognition of Germany's control of Belgium.

The decision of the United States has been awaited by Central and South American governments, who instructed their diplomatic representatives in Washington to discuss it in the Pan-American Union.

The note from the German foreign office, sent identically to all neutral governments, announced that the exequaturs, or certificates of authority, of all neutral consuls had "expired."

No reference was made in either the German note or the American reply to the status of diplomatic officers. American Minister Brand Whitlock will continue at Brussels, where he is in active charge of the Belgian relief work.

The United States declares it considers a consul not a political, but a commercial representative, "who derives permission to do business, irrespective of his legal right, from the authorities in direct control of the district to which he is assigned. In view of the German military occupation of the United States further asserts that it is not inclined to question at this time the right of Germany to suspend exequaturs."

BLOW FOR ORGANIZED LABOR

Supreme Court Annuls Kansas Law Against Coercion by Employers.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The supreme court, with Justices Holmes, Day and Hughes dissenting, handed down a decision regarded as of decisive importance to organized labor.

The court annulled as unconstitutional the Kansas statute making it unlawful for employers to influence any person to enter into an agreement not to join or to remain a member of a labor organization as a condition of such a person obtaining employment.

The majority opinion was based on the contention that there could not be different rules of liberty for employer and employee.

The decision was in the case of T. B. Coppage, a superintendent of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway company, convicted of threatening a switchman with discharge if he did not withdraw from the union.

Iceland Goes "Dry."

Copenhagen, Jan. 26.—The parliament of Iceland, thirty-four of whose members are elected by popular suffrage, has passed a measure forbidding the sale of alcoholic liquors. All the remaining stock in the Danish dependency has been exported.

Felt Safe.

On Jimmie's birthday his mother gave him a knife. A little friend told him that he ought to give his mother a penny, so that it would not cut their friendship, whereupon Jimmie replied, "It won't cut anything else, so I guess it won't cut our friendship."—Delinquer.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS

WHEN I THINK OF ALL THE DOMESTIC TROUBLES I HAVE, I MAKE ME GOOD AND WEARY AND TO MAKE THINGS WORSE, AUNT MAY COMES HERE AND BUTTS INTO EVERYTHING AND CAUSES ALL KINDS OF TROUBLE. JUST LIKE I HAVEN'T PLENTY OF IT WITHOUT HER.

I'VE BEEN MARRIED A GOOD LONG TIME, BUT WHEN YOU COME TO THINK IT OVER, WHAT AN AWFUL LOT OF TROUBLE AND EXPENSE I COULD HAVE SAVED IF I HADN'T MARRIED! I COULDN'T BEGIN TO FIGURE IT OUT.

JUST THINK IF I HAD BEEN FREE ALL THESE YEARS TO GO WHERE I PLEASED, DO WHAT I PLEASED, EAT, SMOKE AND DRINK, WHERE AND WHAT I PLEASED AND LENGTHENED MY LIFE BY BEING SAVED FROM NAGGING AND A THOUSAND AND ONE WORRIES, WHAT A DIFFERENT MAN I'D BE TO-DAY.

TRACING COUNTERFEITERS.

The Secret Service Agents Have a Speedily Effective System.

Some time ago one of the local banks caught during the day a counterfeit ten dollar bill. It was such a clever counterfeit it would pass anybody but an expert. The next day ten or fifteen more of the bad bills were found in the city.

Then the government's machinery to protect its currency began to work. But there was nothing mysterious about its working. In the office of the secret service here an official sat all afternoon smoking and looking at specimens of counterfeit currency. Huge clouds of smoke rose from his pipe. That kept up all day. The reader of detective tales who believes the secret service works in a mysterious way would have been distinctly disappointed. But at last the pipe dropped from the lips of the man sitting at the desk in the federal building with a whole pile of greenbacks in front of him. He took up two bills and compared them carefully. Then he studied them again, noting every little curve and characteristic mark. He stepped to the telephone and called the United States prison at Leavenworth.

"Was James Ward, alias Stewart, alias Nolan, in prison?"

No. James of the two aliases had been out six months. Then telegrams went out to certain officers in certain cities. How they located James Ward the government keeps as a secret. Later the counterfeiter was arrested at Springfield, Ill., and his outfit for raising bills was found with him.

And so another counterfeiter was caught and put out of business. How was it done? Simple enough—if you belong to the secret service. Every counterfeiter has some distinguishing characteristic in his work, some little curve or break in a line that gives him away. The secret service agent compared the new counterfeit with dozens of old counterfeits. At last he found the telltale distinguishing characteristic. And the rest was easy.

James of the two aliases and a counterfeiting device had served three terms before. So there was plenty of his samples.—Kansas City Times.

A Barbarian.

Sir Donald Mann, the Canadian railroad builder, had a sensational career, beginning as an axman in the Canadian lumber woods.

Early in life Mann visited Europe on a business mission and at a dinner one night became involved in a quarrel with a Russian nobleman. Next day he received a call from one of the nobleman's friends, bearing an invitation to a duel. "If he doesn't like what I said to him, let him come up and tell me so," said Mann. "He can come a-running, too, and carry any size gun he likes."

The friend explained that would never do. Nothing but the regular thing on the field of honor would do.

"Oh, all right," said Mann. "I've been fighting duels all my life. But I'll have to insist on using my national weapon—a sixteen pound double bladed ax."

The friend went away holding up his hands at the barbarian. That night the nobleman met Mann. He was about the size of a grasshopper. Mann is something over six feet high and four wide, with no fat. "I fight you, m'sieu," said the nobleman, "with the weapon of any civilized nation, but I hang if I commit suicide."

Austrian Shell Destructive.

Berlin, Jan. 25.—It is officially announced here that the Russian railway station near Chencay, about ten miles southwest of Kielce, southern Poland, which the Austrians destroyed by a single heavy shell, was filled with Russian troops at the time, all of whom were killed.

Frick Plants on Full Time.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 26.—The workmen in the Frick coke plants were put back on full time. The order affects sixty-eight plants and the payroll will be increased $25,000 daily as a result.

WHEAT SETS NEW RECORD

Price in Chicago Market Soars to $1.46 1/2 Per Bushel.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—War prices for wheat soared higher than ever when May delivery touched $1.46 1/2.

The highest previous quotation in Chicago since the European hostilities began was on Jan. 21, when it touched $1.45 1/2.

Corn has developed strength with wheat. The majority of commission houses were on the buying side, and some of the leading professional speculators were also buyers. The opening, which ranged from 1/4 off to 3/4 up, was followed by a radical upturn all around.

Firmness characterized the oats market from the outset. There were advances of a fresh reduction in the estimated surplus of Argentine.

ITCHING ECZEMA IS DRIED RIGHT UP WITH SULPHUR

Use like cold cream to subdue irritation and clear the skin.

Any breaking out or irritation on the face, arms, legs and body when accompanied by itching, or when the skin is dry and feverish, can be readily overcome by applying a little bold-sulphur, says a noted dermatologist.

He informs us that bold-sulphur instantly allays the angry itching and irritation and soothes and heals the Eczema right up leaving the skin clear and smooth. Bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position for many years in the treatment of cutaneous disorders because of its parasite-destroying property. Nothing has ever been found to take its place in treating the irritable and inflammatory skin affections. While not always establishing a permanent cure it never fails to subdue the itching irritation and drive the Eczema away and it is often years later before any eruption again appears.

Those troubled should obtain from any druggist an ounce of bold-sulphur, which is applied to the affected parts in the same manner as an ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded, particularly in itching Eczema, proves very welcome.

Fine for Rheumatic Pains and Neuritis

Begy's Mustarine Surely and Speedily Conquers Pains and Aches and Ends Sore Throat and Chest Colds Overnight.

BEGY'S MUSTARINE is better than mustard plasters—better than hot water bags—better than any cough medicine, poultice or liniment for neuralgia, cold in chest, backache, earache, headache, toothache, sore throat, coughs, colds or any pain or ache in any part of the body.

Just rub it on, that's all; it is always ready; will not blister the tenderest skin and will do anything that a mustard plaster does, and do it quicker.

Get a 25-cent box to-day and keep it on hand at all times. Use it for rheumatic pains and swellings, for lumbago, sprains, strains, soreness, lameness, stiff neck or joints, cramps in legs or pain in stomach.

Rub it on and rid yourself of the distress and misery caused by sore feet, callouses, corns, bunions, frost-bitten feet and chilblains. Be sure it's BEGY'S MUSTARINE in the yellow box. It's the original. People's Drug Store can supply you.

G. W. WEAVER & SON

An Interview With President Lincoln

By F. A. MITCHEL

The fiftieth anniversary of the tragedy that deprived a nation of its head and at the same time made a martyr will soon be here. Those who lived during Mr. Lincoln's time remember him as well for that kindness, that humorous pathos, which characterized him as for the marvelous adroitness with which he steered the ship of state through the turbulent waters of four years of war. His assassination was one of the most tragic events of the world's history.

It was away back in the autumn of 1860. I was then twenty years old, had been graduated from one of the large eastern colleges and had selected journalism for a profession. When asked what was my vocation I did not reply "I am a reporter," but "journalism." From this it is to be inferred that I had a high opinion of the newspaper business and a correspondingly high opinion of my own attributes, being in so exalted a calling.

My work was with a Chicago newspaper, and some time after Abraham Lincoln's election to the presidency of the United States I was directed by the managing editor to go to Springfield, see Mr. Lincoln, if possible, and get an interview. I arrived in Springfield in the morning and in the afternoon went to Mr. Lincoln's home. I was surprised at being admitted without any ceremony whatever and was ushered into a living room, wherein sat the next president in a rocking chair. There were two little boys, his sons, with him, the one sitting on his shoulder, maintaining his position by his grip with both hands on the president elect's hair. The other boy was climbing up behind with a view to dispute his brother's seat and to effect a similar lodgment on the other shoulder.

Mr. Lincoln was restrained from rising with one boy on his shoulder and another holding on to his coat collar. He excused himself for not doing so and put out his hand in a very friendly way. But he made no move to stop the boys from their athletic amusement. This did not seem to me quite in keeping with his dignity as the coming chief executive of a great nation—to me, a journalistic representative of a great newspaper. However, I repressed my feelings and began the interview, first drawing forth with as much importance as I could assume a notebook in which to lay down those remarkable facts which the president elect would announce through me to the nation.

"Mr. Lincoln," I said, "I shall be much obliged to you if you will give me the names of such members of your cabinet as you may have decided upon, if any, and what policy you intend to pursue, if you have settled upon a policy."

Mr. Lincoln looked at me in so kindly, so fatherly a way that I believed he would give me such information as would enable me to astonish the world.

"I shall be glad," he said, "to do anything for you in my power."

"Have you settled on your cabinet, Mr. Lincoln?"

"Oh, yes. Every member has been decided upon."

"And your policy?"

"That has been determined too."

There was something in his eye that puzzled me.

"Would you have any objection to giving them to me?"

"None whatever. You are welcome to it all. Nothing would give me more pleasure than to give."

He was trying to put his hands in his pocket—a somewhat difficult matter with a boy on each shoulder mauling him—to draw forth something, but not finding what he wanted, he continued:

"The truth is that a list of my cabinet and an outline of my policy are in that desk over there, and I have lost the key."

I cast a quick glance at his eye and saw a merry spark in it, while the corners of his mouth were quirked up. I took in the situation at once. Shutting my notebook, I arose and, abashed, was about to withdraw when he stopped me.

"Sit down, young man," he said. "Perhaps I may give you some other points that are not locked up and the key lost. You have come all the way from Chicago for facts, and if you go back empty handed they won't like it. There may be something I can say to help you out."

He proceeded to tell me humorous incidents of the election that had given him the presidency and other items that would not pledge him to any particular course, all of which I took down verbatim. When he had finished he shook off the boys and, rising—I thought that he would surely go through the ceiling—put out his great broad hand and with another of his kindly smiles bade me adieu, hoping that I would satisfy my journal's hungry maw.

That is more than half a century ago. The world now knows what it did not know then—the wise patience of Abraham Lincoln. But what has fixed that wisdom and patience in the hearts of the people is that kindness which the immense burden resting upon him never prevented his exercising, whether it was to a soldier's widow or in considering a deserter's meager asking clemency.

WAR ON RATS.

Farmers do not realize the destruction due to the rat plague, but the world is beginning to consider the rat as the carrier of disease as well as agent of destruction.

In the rat we have a twofold enemy—an enemy that destroys property and an enemy that imperils health.

Let us have community cooperation in an anti-rat campaign. It is estimated that the rats destroy property worth $50,000,000 annually. This seems a small estimate.

Only constant alertness will enable the family to protect itself from the depredations of the rats, but through community cooperation it ought to be possible to rid the country of rats. It is one of those pestilences that bring no compensation whatever. We know some of the benefits of the boll weevil, and some people think that the English sparrow earns its living in checking the growth of the caterpillar, but the rat does no good whatever and is worse than snakes about the henhouse.

WINTER CARE OF CATTLE.

Needs of Live Stock in Cold Season Demand Attention.

In the sections of the country where rigorous weather prevails during the winter careful attention to the needs of live stock will repay the farmer for his trouble many times over. In too many instances cattle emerge from the winter in dull, listless, emaciated condition, their vitality sapped by living under conditions that are incompatible with the development of milk giving propensities.

In the case of feeding dairy cows no hard and fast rule can be laid down. Each cow will be found to differ from her neighbor in surplus vitality over what is needed to assure normal bodily functions and a good average in milk production. By careful observation it can be readily determined which cows are below standard, and a diet composed more largely of fat forming foods will be found to bring them rapidly out of the decline.

Just before a cow comes in the diet should receive particular attention. Subjecting her to cold drafts or permitting her to drink quantities of ice water should be studiously avoided. Such attention is just as necessary before coming in as after.

Care also should be taken to keep bulls in good condition if successful service is desired from them. The practice of keeping the bull in a narrow, dark, dirty stall at the far end of the barn usually results in the animal becoming dispirited and dull, lacking in the necessary vitality. He should have as good a place in the barn as the best cow, and he should be exercised regularly and kept clean.—National Dairy Magazine.

An Inoculation Short Cut.

A progressive Alabama farmer has worked out a short cut in field inoculation that saves time and labor. His method has been studied by Field Agent F. D. Stevens of the federal office of farm management, who considers it worthy of a report to headquarters.

"When a new legume is introduced into a locality," Mr. Stevens reports, "it often happens that one is uncertain about the land's being inoculated. Many prefer to use soil, from 600 to 800 pounds to the acre, from a field in which the legume has been grown successfully. Such fields are rarely within easy driving distance, so the matter of haulage becomes an item. Provided 600 pounds were to be used on each acre of a twenty acre field this would mean six tons of soil to be hauled."

"The year before this Alabama farmer wishes to sow the whole field he inoculates a strip through the middle and sows this strip to the legume. The balance of the field may be sown to wheat or oats or other cover crop. If a good stand results he is sure inoculation is present in the soil covered by the strip."

"The following season, when he sows his whole field, he loads his distributor, then drives to the edge of the field and back, where he refills the machine and drives to the upper side, continuing this until the whole field is covered. "In locating the strip to be inoculated the capacity of the distributor should be taken into consideration and the position of the strip so determined that the machine can be driven to the boundary and back to the source of supply without reloading."

Split Pole Fence.

A fence of split poles or of small round saplings not split can be built, which is very serviceable and durable. The fence is built up in the manner shown by the illustration. Each pole is driven into the ground and rested in the crotch of the crossed uprights. All are then nailed, and the nails should be clinched wherever they reach through the uprights.

It is best to make a good selection of the poles to be used. They should be of uniform length, and the more regular and alike in size they are the better will be the fence.—Wisconsin Agriculturist.
